About the Contributors

MOHAMMED GAMAL ABDELNOUR, Postdoctoral Researcher, Department of Philosophy, York University

Dr Mohammed Gamal Abdelnour is a lecturer of Islamic theology and philosophy at the Faculty of Uṣūl al-Dīn, Al-Azhar University (Cairo) and a lecturer at the Department of Philosophy, University of York, UK. Gamal received his primary, secondary and undergraduate education at Al-Azhar, where he gained the title of ḥāfiẓ of the Quran, deeply studied the various disciplines of the Arabic and Islamic tradition, and graduated as valedictorian of his class with a bachelor's in Islamic Studies and Philosophy in 2011 (Al-Azhar University, Cairo). He holds an MA in Catholic Theology (Durham University, UK) and a PhD in Comparative Theology (SOAS University of London). He is the author of A Comparative History of Catholic and Ash'arī Theologies of Truth and Salvation: Inclusive Minorities, Exclusive Majorities (Brill, 2021) and The Higher Objectives of Islamic Theology: Towards a Theory of Maqāṣid al-'Aqā'id (Oxford University Press, 2022).

KHAIRUDIN ALJUNIED, Professor at the University of Malaya and Senior Fellow

Formerly a Professor and Malaysia Chair of Islam in Southeast Asia at the Alwaleed Centre for Muslim-Christian Understanding, Georgetown University. He is listed among the 500 most influential Muslims in the World in 2024. A recognised specialist in intellectual history, Khairudin Aljunied's research focuses on the connections between Southeast Asia and Global Islam. He is the author and editor of thirteen books and more than thirty internationally refereed articles. Recent publications include Muslim Cosmopolitanism: Southeast Asian Islam in Comparative Perspective (Edinburgh University Press, 2017), Hamka and Islam: Cosmopolitan Reform in the Malay World (Cornell University Press, 2018), Islam in Malaysia: An Entwined History (Oxford University Press, 2019), and Shapers of Islam in Southeast Asia (New York: Oxford University Press, 2022). His upcoming book is Contemplating Sufism: Histories of a Dialogical Tradition in Southeast Asia.

MUHAMMAD AL-SAYYAD, Faculty, al-Azhar University, Cairo

A faculty member at the Faculty of Usul al-Din, Azhar University. His research focuses on Islamic political thought. He has published several books and articles. His latest publications are “Proof of the Qur’an among Sunnis and Shiites,” “The Jurist, Religion, and Authority: Shiite Political Thought between Najaf and Qum”.

YASMIN AMIN, Researcher & Representative of the Orient Institut Beirut (OIB) in Cairo

Yasmin Amin is an Egyptian-German who holds a BA in Business Administration, a PGD, and an MA in Islamic Studies, all from the American University in Cairo. She received her PhD in Islamic Studies from Exeter University’s Institute of Arab and Islamic Studies, researching ‘Humour and Laughter in the Ḥadith’. Her research covers various aspects of gender, early Muslim society and culture, the original texts of Islamic history, law, and Hadith, and gender issues in Islam. Since May 2022, Yasmin Amin has worked at the Orient-Institut Beirut as a Representative of the Orient-Institut Beirut (Max-Weber-Stiftung) in Cairo. She is co-translator (with Nesrin Amin) of ‘The Sorrowful Muslim’s Guide’, and co-editor (with Nevin Reda) of Islamic Interpretive Tradition and Gender Justice: Processes of Canonisation, Subversion and Change (2020). She has published extensively, and her forthcoming book is a translation of Nazira Zeineddine, published by Edinburgh University Press in the Series Muslim Thinkers in Translation.

ABDOU FILALI-ANSARI, Professor Emeritus, The Aga Khan University

He is a distinguished philosopher and writer, and was the Founding Director of the Aga Khan University’s Institute for the Study of Muslim Civilisations (AKU-ISMC), London. Professor Filali-Ansary was educated in Morocco and France and received his doctorate from the University of Dijon in 1970 for a thesis on Spinoza and Bergson. He was a Hubert Humphrey Fellow at Boston University from 1979 to 1980. In Morocco, he taught at Mohammed the Fifth University in Rabat, where he was Secretary-General from 1981 to 1984. He was then, until 2001, the Founding Director of the King Abdul Aziz Foundation, also in Rabat. Professor Filali-Ansary’s publications in Arabic, French and English have contributed greatly to our understanding of the place of Islam in the contemporary world. In 1973, he initiated Prologues, a bilingual Arabic-French journal devoted to promoting intellectual exchange between scholars in the Muslim and non-Muslim worlds. Professor Filali-Ansary is recognised internationally for his work and has participated in many international conferences. In 2012-13, he was Humanities Visiting Professor in Interfaith Studies at the University of Oxford’s Research Centre in the Humanities.

WALID GHALI, Professor, Institute for the Study of Muslim Civilisations, London

Professor of Arabic and Islamic Studies at AKU-ISMC and a specialist in Arabic manuscript studies. He also leads the Aga Khan Library in the United Kingdom. In addition to his administrative duties, he teaches a range of subjects for MA students, including Introduction to Sufism, Arabic Literature, and Muslim Thinkers in the 19th Century. He is one of the lead editors of the Abdou-Filali Ansari Occasional Papers published by AKU-ISMC. Dr Ghali is also the Chair of the Board of Directors of the Islamic Manuscript Association, where he leads an annual workshop on Islamic codicology to increase awareness of Muslim written heritage. In addition to his academic work, Dr Ghali is also a published novelist and short story writer in Arabic. His most recent novel, The Dervish Code, was published in 2023. His fiction offers anthropological narratives about people and life in the Egyptian desert, where he grew up.

ABDUL BASIT HEIKAL, Professor of Islamic and Arabic Studies, Al-Azhar University

Dr Heikal is a professor of Arabic sciences and literature at Al-Azhar University. His research focuses on the religious discourse amongst different Muslim groups. He has several publications, including the book “God’s Gate, Religious Discourse Between Two Parties of the World,” “Love and Sacred Hate, The Dialogue of the grandfather and Grandson,” by Abdel Wahab Azzam, and Ayman Al-Zawahiri, “Reformists in the Niche of Islamic Thought,” “Mechanisms of Academic Writing,” “The Unspoken Articles on Renewing Religious Discourse,” and “Critical Problems.”

GAMAL OMAR, Independent Researcher, Founder of Tafkir Academy, USA

An independent researcher specialising in studying Islamic thought in modern and contemporary times. He published six books, such as “This is How Nasr Abu Zayd Spoke”.

WILLIAM RYLE-HODGES, Researcher

William Ryle-Hodges did his PhD research on Muhammad Abduh and the Urabi Revolution at the University of Cambridge. His research focused on Muhammad Abduh’s journalism and political ideas. Since then, he has been a visiting scholar at the Centre of Islamic Studies in Cambridge and is working with Cambridge University Press to turn his PhD research into a monograph. William has broader interests in 19th-century global liberal thought, the modern state, Islam, adab, and the Nahda and its legacy. On these topics, he has taught courses at the University of Cambridge and has published several articles.

OLIVER SCHARBRODT, Professor of Islamic Studies, Lund University, Sweden

He has published on the intellectual history of modern Islam, Sufism, Twelver Shiism and Muslim minorities in Europe in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, Die Welt des Islams, the British Journal of Middle Eastern Studies, Islam and Christian-Muslim Relations, Contemporary Islam and the Journal of Muslim Minority Affairs. He is the author of Islam and the Baha’i Faith: A Comparative Study of Muhammad Abduh and Abduhl-Baha ‘Abbas (London: Routledge, 2008) and co-authored Muslims in Ireland: Past and Present (Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2015). Together with Yafa Shanneik, he co-edited the volume Shi’a Minorities in the Contemporary World: Migration, Transnationalism and Multi-locality (Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2020). He was editor-in-chief of the Yearbook of Muslims in Europe (Leiden: Brill) from 2015 until 2020. His latest book, Muhammad Abduh: Modern Islam and the Culture of Ambiguity (London: IB Tauris, 2022) illustrates Abduh’s complex engagement with Islam’s diverse intellectual traditions in his reformist discourse. From 2018 until 2023, he served as the principal investigator of the project “Creating an alternative umma: clerical authority and religio-political mobilisation in transnational Shii Islam” which was funded by a Consolidator Grant of the European Research Council (grant agreement no. 724557).

ROBERT WISNOVSKY, Professor of Islamic Studies, Institute of Islamic Studies, McGill University

He received his BA (1986) in Near Eastern Languages and Literatures from Yale University, followed by an MA (1990) and PhD (1994) in Near Eastern Studies from Princeton University, where he was supervised by Professor Hossein Modarressi. He subsequently held a Postdoctoral Research Assistantship (1994–1996) on Professor Richard Sorabji’s Ancient Commentators on Aristotle project in the Department of Philosophy at King’s College London. He began his academic career at Harvard University in the Department of Near Eastern Languages and Civilisations, where he served as Assistant Professor (1996–2002) and then Associate Professor (2002–2004) of Islamic Intellectual History. In 2004, he joined the Institute of Islamic Studies at McGill University, where he is currently James McGill Professor of Islamic Philosophy. He also served as Director of the Institute for two terms, from 2005 to 2008 and from 2016 to 2018.
