About the Author

Marco Calil is a Brazilian academic who holds a PhD in Communication Studies and Semiotics from the Pontifical Catholic University of São Paulo (PUC-SP). He wrote his master's thesis at the University of São Paulo (USP) under the supervision of the renowned Arabist Professor Safa A. C. Jubran.

As a translator of ancient and modern authors into Portuguese, his research interests include the history of science and the arts, the intersection of the humanities and natural sciences, as well as comparative and contemporary philosophy, communication studies, media studies and linguistics.

In Brazil, he has published a handbook on French semiotics and a volume on semiotic philosophy, which examines Lévi-Strauss, Foucault and Lacan, with Contexto, a highly regarded Brazilian publisher. For Gerlach Press, he authored the monograph 'Errors of Averroes: Logic, Poetry and Commentary' (2026), a study of medieval philosophy and literary theory. In collaboration with award-winning literary critic Leda Tenório da Motta, a book on signification and negation in language, philosophy and semiotics, building on the works of François Laruelle and Anne-Françoise Schmid, is due to be published shortly by Palgrave Macmillan.
